CHILDREN'S BOOKS.

This list has been prepared for Ontario Libraries by a Committee of The Ontario Library Association.

It is intended as a guide for Librarians and Library Boards in the selection of books for children. The name of the Author, title of the book, name of the publisher, and retail price, are given. Library Boards should be allowed a discount from the retail prices. The aim of the Committee has been to recommend such books as shall "cultivate the imagination, broaden the horizon, and add to the stock of knowledge of the child."

The children's section should include good stories, history, biography, travel, science, poetry, and, in fact, books in every department of literature. The children's section is probably the most important in the library. It is a training school for readers. The aim of every librarian is, or should be, to foster amongst the patrons of the library a taste for good literature. Little can be done, however, with the confirmed reader of fiction, but the child who is just beginning to form his taste for reading may be led along the lines of natural inclination to an appreciation of the best in literature.

The child reading nothing but stories of adventure may be induced to take out an interesting book of travel.

Fairy tales are eagerly read by children, and their educational value is now fully recognized. A child who is fond of fairy tales may be introduced to the Greek, Roman and Scandinavian mythologies, without which no one can fully understand the literature of to-day.

The child who is interested in the fabled heroes of myth and legend may easily be led to take an interest in the real heroes of history, especially the great men who founded our country and our Empire.

Macaulay's Lays of Ancient Rome is an excellent first book of poetry for boys, so also is the Lays of the Scottish Cavaliers, as narrative poetry appeals especially to the child. Poems, such as have been mentioned, may be made first rungs in the ladder until the child, step by step, comes to appreciate the works of the world poets.

Most children are fond of Nature books, and the well equipped children's library should contain a good selection of books on natural history.

Stories of invention and elementary science books will be found of interest to many juvenile readers. The English classics and good translations of foreign classics should find place upon the children's shelves. It may be that comparatively few children can be found who appreciate them, but they should be there for those who do. It is advisable to procure handsome illustrated editions of such books, so that they may be as attractive as possible, and the librarian should take special pains to increase their circulation. A child brought into contact with what is best in literature may develop a special taste which may indicate what should be his life-work.

The library should contain a large number of good stories. These will attract the child to the library, and an opportunity is then given to the librarian to recommend better reading.

The library must meet the competition of the dime novel and the sensational story paper, and for this purpose nothing is more effective than the sound wholesome fiction of Henty, Strang or Macdonald Oxley. The librarian should not attempt to force any book on a child. He should take an interest in each child and endeavor to ascertain the child's taste, so that he may tactfully influence the reading of the child for good by easy steps. Frequent additions should be made to the children's section. This is a much better plan than that of making additions only yearly or halt yearly Children are much more interested in the library where new books, even if only a few, are added every month, than where a number are put in at the end of the year. It is most important that books which deal with historical questions should be soundly patriotic in tone. There are many children's books published in the United States which, excellent as they may be for American children, should find no place on the shelves of Canadian libraries.

While the Committee has included desirable books by foreign authors, taking what is good wherever found, care has been taken that no book which would tend to weaken the child's patriotism should be found upon this list, and on the other hand, many books inculcating the love of country have been included in the catalogue.

The librarian should seek the co-operation of the parent and the teacher in directing the reading of the child. Many of the books in this list will be found of value to the teacher in prescribing supplementary reading for his pupils, and it should be the endeavor of the librarian to keep the teacher in close touch with the library's work for children.

This list has not been graded according to the age of the child. All such grading is arbitrary. What is best for a child at a certain age depends on the individuality of the child, and of this the librarian or the teacher is the best judge, having, of course, due regard to the child's own inclination.

One objection to graded lists is that the class is made the unit instead of the child. Many children are able to read and appreciate books far beyond the capacity of some of the adult readers.

Where statistics have been obtained as to the circulation of books among children, it is found that books considered as quite beyond the comprehension of the ordinary child have a very considerable circulation among children. It follows, also, from what has been said that the library should have no age limit, but that any child, no matter how young, desiring a book, should have the privileges of the library.

Where possible the Library Board should provide a special room for children, separate from the general stackroom where children's books can be placed by themselves. Where this is not possible, a section of the stackroom should be set aside for juvenile literature. Free access to the shelves encourages a wider range of reading.

A child who reads nothing but stories may be attracted to a better class of literature while examining the shelves. It is not pretended that the following list is exhaustive or complete, and no doubt there are many sins of omission, but it is hoped that no book is included which upon any grounds should not have been placed on the list.

The annual list of best books issued by The Ontario Library Association includes books for juveniles as well as adults, and should be consulted by librarians.

The Committee has received valuable assistance from a number of publishers, librarians and others, and desire to return its warmest thanks to those who have thus aided it in its work.
